Working with a collective of children, youth, and adults with varying needs and abilities sparked her passion for connecting with others through a shared passion of music and theater. Having worked for Orlando Family Stage for over four years, one of Savannah's greatest joys is fostering young performers' passion and excitement for the stage, and encouraging them to form connections with their peers through their shared experiences on and offstage! In the little spare time she has between her multiple jobs, you can find Savannah posting satirical takes on customer service and barista life, and continuing to actively serve as a producer, collaborator, and mother of several passion projects, including a Dungeons and Dragons multimedia campaign, and an audio-only podcast-style musical told through the music of Fleetwood Mac.
